It was well expressed in the vote on the fiscal measure to supply funds for the presecution of the war, when out of "During the hot weather of the summer many persons engaged in the sale of ice resorted to high-handed and despicable methods in dealing with their customers. In many instances consumers who were unwilling to receive short weight were summarily refused ice, and others were threatened with having their supply cut off unless they submitted without protest to such indignities as the dispenser wished to heap upon them or to receiving such weight as he chose to deliver. This statement does not, of course, apply to all persons engaged in the sale of ice. There were found some noteworthy exceptions, but on the whole the situation was bad, and but for the splendid work of the food administrator for the District, and the earnest efforts of this department, cooperating with each other, a most distressing situation would have been brought about.
